Was it a bridge too far?

A gentle chill blew up from the beach keeping the hounds on their toes as they admired the beach far below. Soon we were off and down on that beach in the loop that was the opening stanza, and had Scud mumbling. On up to the headland through some great bush and down to the next beach, not fooling Larry, but catching Wanker and the Druid. "Arrgh" a false had many eager hashman running down the stairs and trudging back again. Skirting the coastal bushland, with Brock making a return to form, we got to Narrabeens' outer lake and some were not convinced that the Trailmaster was being honest when instructing "Under the bridge" (was that going too far?).

The Baron was off through the caravan park and across an oval, with only Tic Toc feeling the need to follow trail all the way round, while XXXX hardly paused before his shortcut. Irish blew his bugle, causing those swinging on the range to top their balls, and Khyber and Lightning knew they were on track for home.

Across the creek and up those stairs, almost home now. Super was already heading for the Sands as the walkers arrived, racing Pee Dub for the preferred parking. A good pub meal for $11 enjoyed by all with appearances by the Moochers who are returning for the Summer.
