Hoarse Whisperer see's track & numbers Plunged in the wet

The Run

The clouds hung low over the Elanora escarpment and the wind was brisk from the east as the new committee struggled to erect the tarpaulin for the On On, an activity not yet mastered on their watch, but ably assisted by Saltpetre. The combination of threatening weather, the Burma hash holiday and the location being too far from Mosman and too far up the Mona Vale Road resulted in a small pack of diehards ready for the off.

The run started with a slither down the escarpment as XXXX smashed the fragile boardwalk. The trail continued to cross, not once but twice the Wakehurst Parkway whilst the entire car population of Pittwater was making its way home in one continuous line; not a smart move by the hares why not just start at Deep Creek Reserve?

De Gaulle and Tyre Fruck sensibly waited for a gap while others including Cat'n Bligh tried to become hood ornaments. However with the likes of Darwin Don, General Disaster and God Knows not on the run all hounds managed the crossings without mishap.

Once safely over the trail split to let the walkers fend for themselves and the runners to tackle the steep slippery climb up to the fire trail on the ridge between Middle and Deep creeks. With the checks easy and predictable the usual suspects raced out of sight leaving the remnants of the runners strung out behind. Not even the false at the mid point turn for home did much to slow them.

The return trail down the track to Deep Creek was easier going and with a momentary stop at the Deep Creek waterfall it was on to the footbridge for Cinders and Petit Poop at the end of the creek.

With the bucket tantalising close, the climb back up the escarpment as darkness descended seemed to go on for ever.

Surprisingly all hounds got back in a reasonable time to be met with the welcome sight of a still standing tarpaulin, cold beer and plenty of food.

The inclement weather making it unpleasant to hang around meant a quick feed, a short sharp address by the acting President, a brief spell of humor and the daunting challenge to the committee to take down the tarpaulin without being blown off the escarpment.

Down downs to the Hares Plunger and Hoarse, 7 bridges walkers, Poofta patrolling Philthy and high vis complying Poly and
